WHEELING, JUNE 10, 1891.

Why We Are Going to Make It.

We are going to make tin plate in this country on a large scale because we know how to make it and because its manufacture, once established, will be profitable to manufacturers and to the country.

In twenty-five years we have paid for foreign manufacturers the enormous sum of $320,000,000 for tin plate. One does not have to be very wide between the eyes to appreciate the benefit of keeping at home this much money representing largely the wages of labor from the ground up.

We know that we have been paying too much for our tin plate. Reasoning in the light of experience, we know that if we establish the industry at home we shall cheapen the cost to consumers as certainly as we shall give employment to our own labor. If disappointment were in store for us with regard to price we would still gain by keeping the money at home.

We shall not reap the full benefit until the day the tin plate tariff goes into effect, on July 1. A great industry cannot be rooted in a day. But this one will take root because it is to be planted in a congenial soil. Only a fool Congress can prevent a splendid success. Welsh manufacturers are afraid of it and American manufacturers are patriotically determined to win it.

If we could make in Wheeling all the tin plate the country uses, Wheeling would at once loom up as a greater Chicago. There is no better place in the world than Wheeling for the manufacture of tin plate. It would fit right in with our iron and steel, in which we are expert and successful. We make the steel and we make the plate, and it is not much of a trick to tin it.

The Baccarat Scandal Verdict.

The verdict against Sir William Gordon-Cumming is no surprise. Unless the jury believed the witnesses were all prevaricators as well as gamblers the cheating at the baccarat table was clearly made out.

Sir William Gordon-Cumming is but one, and not the greatest, of the characters in a performance that comes very near to being a tragedy, and though the verdict of the jury goes against him, the verdict of a larger and more important jury goes against the whole gang of aristocratic gamblers including the sprig of royalty, who has most to lose. There was no way for the jury, in view of the testimony, to show what it thought of the Prince of Wales and the other accused of Sir William. If they had been under indictment for gambling, every one of them would have been convicted. If the Prince of Wales had been on trial for bringing royalty into contempt, there would have been no escape for him.

As it is every member of the Tranby Croft party suffers almost equally with Sir William. All upstartdom has been struck, for it has been shown that this stratum of society is as frail as the lower million. Royalty and its attendant aristocracy could have afforded better to lose half its wealth than to pass through this degrading exposure.

Openings for Disgraced English Soldiers.

Nonsense to talk about Sir William Gordon-Cumming's career being blighted beyond all hope. He will be put out of his clubs and fired out of the army. But what of that? Captain Valentine Baker was bounced from the army for assaulting a young woman in a railway car, went to Turkey, became a pasha with several tails and died a man of note.

Sir William Gordon-Cumming, with his record as a gallant and capable soldier, will easily find service where he may distinguish himself again. So far as the Tranby Croft affair is concerned, the public will continue to believe that things went on there which did not come out in court.

Mr. Mayor Seabright's other name were Solon he would not play straight into the hands of Sunday liquor law breakers. But the people have twice elected him mayor, and that is glory enough for him. He is in the habit of saying with unanswerable logic that if the people did not want his sort of mayor for mayor they would elect another sort.

New York is to see some more journalism. The Continent passes away, and in its place comes the Morning Advertiser, with Col. John A. Cockerill, formerly of the World, as editor. Col. Cockerill becomes editor also of the old Commercial Advertiser, which continues to be an evening paper. The Morning Advertiser will make a place for itself. It is good and bright and will be better and brighter. Col. Cockerill knows how to make a newspaper, and it gives him pleasure to keep the gentle reader guessing as to what he will do next to maintain the interest at high-water mark.

In his editorial in the New York Morning Advertiser Colonel Cockerill notes the fact that there are to-day in the metropolis no more newspapers than there were twenty-five years ago. So it is almost everywhere. The established newspapers hold the field and grow in circulation and influence.

Mr. CAHENSLEY is billed for an American tour. He will not upset anything and he will learn several things. He will discover a spirit of nationalism that will open his eyes. Take us all around we are a great people, not at this moment in need of any foreign wetnursing.

Much stuffy nonsense is being printed about the President and his sister-in-law's pension. If Mrs. Harrison was entitled to the pension it wasn't necessary to cheat her out of it because her husband was Benjamin Harrison's brother, was it?

SENATOR QUAY has been to see the President, but they did not talk politics. Certainly not. When people meet nowadays they talk about crops and the export of gold. Next year the talk will run on politics.

In due course of mail we shall hear of sundry Republicans who would like to be governor of West Virginia. Republicans, in may be noticed, are not so forward as Democrats.

A FREE-HAND interview with the Princess of Wales just now would be worth a fortune to a newspaper. It would probably drive her disloyal royal spouse to suicide.

The County Commissioners go to-day to inspect the National Road. It will be a pleasure to record their safe return over that once great highway, the pride of the country.

In deference to the fine feelings of our free trade friends we shall have to speak of it as a partial prohibition. Forbidden subjects must be handled delicately.

SIR EDWARD CLARKE will not expect many royal favors when Albert Edwards reaches the throne, if ever that shall come to pass. Royalty knows its own.

The World's Fair will open and close in glory before the New York newspapers will find out that there is going to be a World's Fair. Isn't it funny?

WALES has one great advantage over us in the manufacture of tin plate. She can work her cheap female labor on it and we can't.

SUNDRY able Democrats are willing to be nominated for governor of New York, but David B. Hill has not yet said whom it shall be.

It is discovered that monkeys can talk. This is true. We have heard them, but they had outgrown their tails.

THE INTELLIGENCER sends greeting to the bold soldier boys at Morgantown and wishes them a fair day and a happy one.

WHAT is the use of talking about this place and that for next year's national conventions? Chicago is the convention city.

Gen. Grosvenor will not go to Europe until he has attended the Ohio Republican convention.

Gen. C. H. Taylor, of the Boston Globe, contradicts the statement that he has acquired an interest in the New York Recorder.

Queen Victoria, having completed her seventy-second year, has exceeded in age all other English sovereigns except two—Georges II. and III.

Mrs. Bayard Taylor, accompanied by her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Kilgill, has returned to America. They all intend to make this country their home.

W. W. Story has finished the monument and medallion which are to be placed on Theodore Parker's grave at Florence. The ceremony will take place August 24.

Renan is said to have the final volume of his "History of Israel" placed upon the Index Expurgatorius, because it will set many a priest and many a curious Protestant, he thinks, to reading it.

M. Eiffel, the engineer, who conceived the tower in Paris which bears his name, lives up on the Jungfrau, in the Swiss Alps. He has just obtained permission to build a railroad up the mountain to his dwelling.

Senator Pettigrew is a Vermont man who went west and grew up with Dakota. He went there in 1879 as a laborer for a United States deputy surveyor. When South Dakota came into the Union he went into the United States Senate.

Somebody saw Mrs. Sheridan one day with a pile of children's garments before her and she was asked what sort of trimmings she would put on them. "Good buttons and buttonholes—that's all I can do with four small children," answered the soldier's widow promptly.

A little boy from Northeast, Md., while visiting his grandmother in Chester, fell asleep on the floor and rolled under the bed. Before he reappeared the police were scouring the town for the missing boy.

A farmer near Bloomfield, Conn., awoke one morning last week to find that a hill twelve feet high on his land had sunken during the night several inches. Since then the mound has entirely disappeared.

The Chinese paper currency is in red, white and yellow paper, with gilt lettering and gorgeous hand-drawn devices. The bills, to the ordinary financiers, might pass for washing bills, but they are worth good money in the Flowery Kingdom.

The highest place in the world regularly inhabited is said to be the Buddhist monastery, Haine, Thibet, which is about 18,000 feet above sea level. The next highest is Galera, a railway station in Peru, which is located at a height of 15,632 feet.

A contract has been drawn up by a well known lawyer and signed and sworn to by some twenty odd of the leading business and professional men of Wellsville, agreeing in the future to neither "treat" nor be "treated." The badge of the order is a small copper cent worn as a pin.

An absent-minded Philadelphia father consented to wheel the baby to the park in the coach, and the mother flew up stairs to put as many unnecessary clothes on it as possible. When she got down the father was gone, and she saw him in the dim distance pushing the empty vehicle.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is about to put on a new train to Chicago, to be known by the name of the "Illindopany Special." This mongrel word is a conglomeration of the first letters of the Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, the States through which the train will run.

CAPITAL IN WEST VIRGINIA.

Some Sensible Comments on the Intelligencer's Development Edition.

Toledo (Ohio) Commercial.

The Wheeling INTELLIGENCER's State industrial edition of last week is a highly creditable exhibition of newspaper enterprise, and comes just at the right time to be of great value to the little Mountain State. It advertises to the country at large the rich natural resources of West Virginia and directs particular attention to the surprising movement of eastern capital into the State during the past few years. Natural resources also, however, have not brought about the industrial activity now so noticeable. The resources have always been there. Capital was wanted and West Virginia set about it to encourage it to come. Property encouraged, capital came. After it got there it was made to feel at home, and great strides were made in industrial development.

So long as West Virginia can maintain a reputation for fairness or friendliness to outside capital her material improvement will be marked. Of any other State the same is true. We have great faith in honesty, integrity and common horse sense of the solid business men of this country, and wherever they have the courage and strength to hold a tight rein on the professional politicians will be found a prosperous community and a safe place for the investment of capital. We say this now in connection with the INTELLIGENCER's industrial edition, because there has been a disposition in West Virginia lately to encourage capital by friendly legislation.

CREDITABLE JOURNALISM.

How a Metropolitan Journalist Regards the Intelligencer's Enterprise.

Mr. Mural Halstead's Brooklyn Standard-Union.

The Wheeling (W. Va.) INTELLIGENCER opens the summer with a twenty-eight page, thirty-two, 100,000 "boom edition," devoted to the exploitation of the marvelous growth and still more marvelous prospects of the "Nail City" and the State of which it is the commercial capital. It is a highly creditable piece of journalism, and gives much useful information concerning a commonwealth whose development, though long delayed, must be certain and magnificent. Last year, for instance, Wheeling shipped nearly four million tons of manufactured products, iron, steel, glass and wool, or nearly a third more than in the previous year, and enough to fill a freight train from New York to Omaha.

Four great railroad systems, the Baltimore & Ohio, the West Virginia Central, the Chesapeake & Ohio, and the Norfolk & Western, under modern ideas and progressive management, are opening up a great deal of new country in West Virginia, while within the city limits the Wheeling Bridge and Terminal Company are expending five millions of dollars in bridges, tunnels and other improvements. It is positively stated that the shortest practicable railroad line from New York to Chicago is via Wheeling, and its hope to be on "a leading east and west trunk line" is in a fair way to be realized.

Little Short of a Marvel.

Charleston Daily Star.

The biggest newspaper ever published in West Virginia was the boom edition of the Wheeling INTELLIGENCER, which made its appearance on Thursday last. It had twenty-eight big pages, all full of overflowing with valuable information about our State. Among other things was a picture of the Kanawha river bridge. The whole is little short of a marvel, and will be worth thousands of dollars to the State of West Virginia. All who feel an interest in the resources and development of our State, should secure a copy by all means.

Is Marriage a Failure?

The model husband was seen on a Detroit street recently. He had a letter written by his wife stuck in his hat-band so as to have a sure thing on mailing it.

A Kentucky jury refuses to reward damages to a husband whose wife has been enticed from his home by machinations of a gay deceiver. The jury holds that the abandoned husband ought to rejoice that the unfaithful wife is out of the way and be grateful to the man who persuaded her to leave, instead of suing him for damages.

Women are excluded from the galleries of the Japanese Parliament because, as a Japanese newspaper says, "they might be moved by the debates there to further political agitation in the empire."

The bridal veil originated in the custom of performing the nuptial ceremony under a square piece of cloth, held over the bride and groom to conceal the blushes of the former. At the marriage of a widow it was dispensed with.

One day's record of brave deeds last week tells of a woman who captured a thief, another who successfully defended her home against two men, a third who arrested a burglar and a fourth who rescued a young woman from several assailants.

A girl in Wilkesbarre, Pa., was much bothered to choose a husband from a list of five candidates for her affections. She was advised by a wise old woman to make them all send in proposals in writing, because "when a man is proposing you can't tell anything about him." The longest letter breathed unholy devotion over eight large pages; but the young man who won the prize wrote simply this: "I will always do my duty as a faithful husband." Kate and Fred were married.

PRINTERS IN EUROPE.

A Member of the Craft Talks of His English Trip.

A Printer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The American workman who makes a trip to England, intending to work at his trade while making the tour, will meet with a great many disappointments. Notwithstanding the fact that English mechanics are admitted to full fellowship in American trades unions, the American in England is handicapped to such an extent that it amounts in reality to a boycott. I made a trip to London once and tried to earn my expenses while there, and a hard time I had of it.

One rainy morning I applied to the "master" (foreman) of a print shop for work, and while I stood outside in the rain, he stood inside the doorway and propounded the following queries: "Where are you from?" "I told him the United States." "Where did you work?" "On the Globe-Democrat, New York Herald and other newspapers," I replied. "How much can you make there?" "I said, "A pound a day." "My God, man, why didn't you stay there?" "I will if ever I can earn enough to pay my way back," was my disgusted reply. "Well, if what you tell me is true, you are either a mighty poor workman or a fugitive from justice," and he slammed the door in my face.

UNREST IN PARADISE.

It Was Very Beautiful and Bright, but There Was One Drawback.

Boston Courier.

Two women met in Paradise. Where they had recently arrived; And each one of the other asked: How in the bright abode she thrived. Then straightaway each one made reply, "It's very beautiful and bright, And everything to please the ear, And everything to feast the sight." Then each exhaled a long, deep sigh, And said: "I've searched in every nook, But nowhere can I find a glass To see how these new garments look."

HERR KAHENSLEY IS COMING.

But Editor Dworzak Says He Will Be Coolly Received.

New York Herald.

Herr M. Kahensley, member of the Prussian Diet, who, at the recent Lucerne conference so strongly advocated the appointment for this country of Catholic bishops of the same nationalities as the immigrants landing here, and who has since laid his project before the pope, is expected to arrive in this country soon in the interest of the scheme. In his memorial to the pope M. Kahensley claimed that the spiritual wants of foreign Catholics were not properly attended to in this country. This assertion has been indignantly denied by the Church authorities in this country, and Mr. Kahensley is likely to receive a very cool reception. His object in coming, it is thought, is to get the Germans interested in his scheme and secure their indorsement, but Victor Dworzak, the editor of the Katholische Volksblatt, the leading German Catholic paper of the United States, says that the Germans in this city will have nothing to do with him, as they regard him as a meddling. "Mr. Kahensley," said Mr. Dworzak, "is Secretary of the St. Raphael Society, an organization whose object is to look after the interests of German immigrants. If he confines himself to the work of his society nobody will object, but the Catholics of America are well able to take care of their own spiritual affairs, and will not tolerate foreign interference."
